

INTRODUCTION

This process book describes the quarter-long journey my teammates and I have embarked on in order to create an application to help improve student-life at the University of Washington.

In an effort to “burst the campus bubble” and overcome the insularity of campus-life, our application helps facilitate and encourage exploration outside of the University District. This process book details the decisions, conflicts and rationales behind our final design solution, additionally describing the team dynamics and responsibilities that effectively meshed together in order to culminate our final project.

Had it not been for the contributions of my wonderful team members, Chris Leatham and Michael Nguyen this design would not be what it is today.

I hope you enjoy our process journey as much as I did.
